PREFACE

This is but an outline sketch of the life of Dr. James Hunter, and of the various members of the different branches of his family, down to, and including the year 1923. We have extended the record of the descendants of the female members of the family who marry, one generation beyond what is generally given, in order to show connections, and trace relationships as far as second cousins.

This record will be found imperfect in some particulars. There are spaces that we have not been able to fill; and there are names of those whose records should be fuller and more complete.

We have found great difficulty in obtaining even as full and clear information as would seem to have been possible. Several members of the family have neglected to reply to repeated requests for information.

This lack of interest, and apparent neglect to give information, or to give it as full and complete as possible, doubtless results from the thought that genealogical records are of little value or importance. But in this I think that they are in error.

As nations have their histories recording events of the past, and that trace up through the centuries the course of their advance; even so, also, should families, the origin of many of which go far back into the dim past, and whose records are, in many cases, intimately intertwined with the history of the nation.

It would therefore seem to be wise and consistent that these records should be preserved, so far as possible. It may not be best, then, to be influenced by the musings of the poet, who writes:

What thoughts have we of whence we came?
What time to trace up family name?
The past is gone, why then record
It's varied life, and day's reward?

Errors will be found in some of these records, due largely, to inability to get corrections made, and to changes in business interests, and places of residence.

We have given each record as full, and as correct as the information supplied would enable us. In a few cases we have supplemented the information received by material preserved during past years, and from memory sources.

The record of Dr. James Hunter has been very largely prepared from personal records, and from memory, by the writer, who, for some years lived in Brooklin, Canada, in the family of his Grandfather.

Much valuable information was obtained from Mrs. Emma (Hunter) Campbell, and from Mrs. Attilia (Hunter) Rouse, the only living representatives of the second generation during the time this book was being prepared for printing.

Others have supplied important items of interest and value, in addition to personal and family records. But we are especially indebted to Dr. G. Hunter Bartlett, of Buffalo, New York, for special suggestions, and corrections in the preparation of the manuscript, for important information that he had gathered from various sources, for making special investigations, and for copies of business letters from Dr. Hunter's agent, or attorney at Hedon, Yorkshire, England, in regard to the settlement of his business interests, and a copy of his medical diploma from the "College of Physicians and Surgeons" of Fairfield, New York. The Hunter Coat of Arms was also kindly supplied by Dr. Bartlett. Dr. James Hunter brought with him from England the family seal bearing the greyhound crest. This was unfortunately destroyed, many years ago, in a fire.

The statement in regard to the descent of many of this name from three brothers who were associated with William Penn, and his colony, may be incorrect.

It is based upon a statement made some years ago in Philadelphia by one of this name, in the course of a conversation in regard to the emigration from England of the various lines of this family to this country.

We have endeavored to have this statement verified, but have not been able to obtain further information. In the "Hunter Family Records," published by William Clemens of Pompton Lakes, N. J., no mention is made of these three brothers; and this writer seems to have made careful investigation of all migrations of individuals or families of this name to this country; and yet this publication is of only a portion of the material gathered by him.

EDWIN GUSTAVUS HUNTER.

THE ANTIQUITY OF THE NAME

The antiquity of the name "Hunter" reaches back to Scotland. We have not traced the origin of the name, nor have we traced the early history of the family in its Scotch home. This research would be interesting, and would not, probably, be attended with much difficulty. Genealogical and historical records are numerous, and reasonably full and complete; and any one desirous of tracing back family lines of descent would undoubtedly find in these works, supplemented by Parish records, and cemetery inscriptions, all that would be of importance, and of essential value.

Our present purpose does not require that we do more than record the few historical notices that we have of the Hunter family in its Scotch home, in the way of an introduction, or preface, to the record of Dr. James Hunter of Yorkshire, England, and of his descendants. The earliest of these notices is of one Gulielmus Venator (William Hunter), who appears as a witness in the charter of eviction of the Bishop of Glasgow, by David I, when he was Prince of Cumberland, about A.D. 1100. And in a charter of Alexander II, King of Scotland, A.D. 1214, of the lands of one Manners to William Baddeby, upon the resignation of Nicholas Corbat of these lands, and others, the lands of Norman Hunter are exempt.

The most prominent seat, if not the original home of the Scotch family, seems to have been at Hunterston, Ayrshire, although there was another very ancient family of this name known as the Hunters of Tweeddale, that may have been, either a branch from the Hunterston family, or a collateral line from a more ancient seat from which also the Hunterston family descended. We have made no examination of this question. Long Calderwood, in Lanarkshire, has been thought by some to have been an important seat of the Scotch Hunters; but a careful examination shows that this family was only a few generations removed from the ancestral home at Hunterston. John and William Hunter, the celebrated surgeons of London in the 18th century, were sons of this family. Some authorities state that the Laird of Hunterston was three times married, and that he left three families of children. If this is true there are many collateral lines of descent from this original seat of the name.

We have not been able to find any record of the probable time of the emigration of any branch or member of this family to England; but we were interested in reading, many years ago, the statement in some historical record, that a prominent member of this Scotch family was friendly to England in the Scotch wars of Edward I, and Edward II, when Scottish loyalty was divided between the two claimants for the Scottish crown, Balial and Bruce, and many gave aid to the English arms. Upon the conclusion of a truce about A.D. 1323, the English army returned to England, and this prominent Scotch adherent was reported to have left his native land, and to have settled in England.

If this statement rests on any good historical grounds, it is probable that this settlement was in Lincoln County, where, in the 17th century we find an English branch of the family who are said to have descended from James Hunter, fourth son of Robert Hunter, of Hunterston, County of Ayr, Scotland. Major General Robert Hunter of this family, not only won literary fame, and was the friend of Addison and Swift, but also became Royal Governor of New York, and New Jersey, and later of Jamaica, where he died in 1734. The wife of General Robert Hunter was the widow of Lord John Hay, the second son of the Marquis of Tweeddale, and the daughter of Sir Thomas Orby, Baronet, of Croyland Abbey.

From this marriage the descendants of General Robert Hunter prefixed Orby to the family name and were known as "Orby-Hunter." It was also through this marriage that the original Coat of Arms was quartered with the family arms of Orby, Howard, and Gerard. It has been thought, by some, that this Coat of Arms, thus quartered, also belonged to that branch of the family from which Dr. James Hunter descended.

Dr. Bartlett of Buffalo has given this subject considerable attention, devoting much time to an examination of sources of information, and concludes that there is nothing to justify such a belief. General Hunter died only sixty-one years before grandfather's birth and, in that comparatively short space of time, his direct descendants were well known and carefully recorded. Moreover they all bore the name of Orby-Hunter to distinguish them from other branches of the Hunter family and have continued to do so to this day. Grandfather's distant kinship to this branch of the family and to that of Long Calderwood is however indicated by the family seal, bearing the greyhound crest, which he brought with him from England, and by his own statement that he was a distant kinsman of the famous John and Dr. William Hunter.

It is not improbable that the ancestors of Dr. Hunter had been living in Yorkshire for many generations, and yet may have been a collateral line from the Lincoln County family from which General Hunter also descended. This is not a matter of serious importance, although of special family interest, and may, we hope, yet be given further consideration by some interested member of the family. It is quite clear, from existing evidence, that in the eighteenth century there were many of this name living in the vicinity of Hull, and also in the city of York. Scott, the novelist, in "St. Ronan's Well," speaks of Dr. Alexander Hunter, of York, who is known to have published an important medical work, and who may have been of the same family line as Dr. James Hunter. But wherever the first representatives of the Scotch family, or later emigrations, settled in England, it is quite certain that in the middle of the 18th century their descendants would have been more or less scattered. An old publication recording the names of the graduates of the University of Oxford, shows that the Hunters were well represented, and that they were not representatives of any particular part of the country.

It has been thought that Dr. James Hunter may, possibly, have descended from the Hunters of Long Calderwood, Scotland; but Dr. Bartlett, from whom we have already quoted, is conversant with the facts and he states that this is an error. He says, "Long Calderwood was a very small estate about seven miles from Glasgow, owned by John Hunter, grandson of Francis Hunter, third son of Patrick Hunter, Laird of Hunterston in Ayrshire. Of this John Hunter's sons, the only ones who lived to manhood were, James who died before he was thirty, leaving no heirs; Dr. William Hunter, of London who died unmarried in 1783; and John Hunter, the greatest surgeon of his time, who died in 1793, leaving a son who died young without issue. So this theory of grandfather's descent could not be true."

Thus it would seem clear that the Hunters of Lincoln County, represented in General Robert Hunter, and the ancestors of Dr. James Hunter, the subject of this record, as also all others of this name in England, are all descended from the ancient family of the Hunters of Hunterston, Ayrshire, Scotland.

It may seem somewhat inappropriate to include in this record brief accounts of William and John Hunter of this Long Calderwood family, and of their sister Dorothea, the wife of Professor James Baillie, D.D. of Glasgow University; but it may be of interest, in that this family were distant kinsmen of the Yorkshire, and the Lincoln County Hunters, although not their ancestors.

Dorothea was the mother of Joanna Baillie, and of Dr. Matthew Baillie. Joanna was the most famous woman writer of her time, and a great friend of Sir Walter Scott, who called her "The immortal Joanna." Her brother, Dr. Baillie, became equally as celebrated as his famous uncles, in London, as an anatomist and pathologist.

Dr. William Hunter originally studied for the ministry, but turning to medicine he took a thorough course in anatomy, and in 1746 became a teacher, and later, a lecturer on surgery and anatomy. He was physician to the Queen, and a member of the Royal Society, and in 1764 professor of anatomy at this institution. During the course of his professional practice he established a museum of very great interest and value, which, at his death, he left to be finally transferred to the Glasgow University. This magnificent collection of rare books, paintings, minerals, thirty thousand coins, and his anatomical specimens, was valued, even then, at half a million dollars.

John Hunter was ten years younger than his brother William; and until the fame of his brother aroused his ambition he had a very limited education. He studied anatomy and surgery, and in 1754 became assistant to his brother. But his health failing he became a staff-surgeon in the army. Later he became surgeon to St. George's Hospital, surgeon to the King, and surgeon-general of the army. He was the acknowledged head of his profession. He also established a museum which was purchased by the government, after his death, and presented to the Royal College of Surgeons. At his death his burial was in St. Martin's in-the-Field, but in 1859 his body was removed to Westminster Abbey, and a brass floor tablet was placed over the grave, bearing the Hunter arms, an inscription and this most appropriate text for the tireless searcher into the mysteries of comparative anatomy: "O Lord, how marvellous are Thy works, in wisdom hast Thou made them all."

With the deaths of these prominent representatives of the Long Calderwood Hunters the record shows that after the death of John Hunter's surviving son and daughter without issue, the property passed to William Hunter-Baillie, son of Dr. Matthew Baillie, the nephew. Long Calderwood was a small estate near Glasgow, bought by the father of the celebrated medical men. It was not a part of the ancient family property.

In regard to the Hunters of Canada, and the United States, several lines of emigration have been traced. Of those in Canada it would appear that many were of direct Scotch descent; and many in the United States may be descendants of those who originally came to Canada; but others, especially those of English descent, may trace their English connection through known early emigrations to New England, to Virginia, and to three brothers who are reported to have been associated with William Penn, and his colony, in the early settlement of Philadelphia. Yet there may be others who have no apparent connection with any of these lines of descent, but whose connection with the English family could be traced through other sources. But, though these various lines of origin of the Hunters of this country, whether of English or of Scotch descent, have no apparent family connection, yet all may undoubtedly be traced back to Hunterston, County of Ayr, Scotland, as the original ancestral home.

Anyone specially interested in examining lines of descent of many of the Hunters of the United States, and items of both family and national interest connected with those of this name, will find very much valuable information in a small booklet, entitled "Hunter Family Records, &c." by William M. Clemens, of Pompton Lakes, New Jersey.

For detailed accounts of Dr. William and John Hunter see: "William Hunter" by R. Hingston Fox, M.D., London, 1901 (published by H. K. Lewis), and "John Hunter" by Stephen Paget, London, 1908. (Published by Longmans, Greene & Co., New York.)

COAT OF ARMS

The heraldic description of the Hunter coat of arms is as follows: Arms of Hunter of Hunterston, County Ayr, Scotland.

CREST.—A greyhound's head and neck, coupéd, argent.

CREST.—A greyhound's head and neck cut off smooth, in silver.

MOTTO.—"I accomplish the race."

Note: "Vert" means green, "Argent" is silver, "Or" is gold and "Gules" is red. The word "First" signifies the first color or metal mentioned, which in this case is Vert (or green). "Second" signifies the second color or metal mentioned which is Argent (or silver). The fine diagonal lines signify green. They are used only when the shield is printed in plain black and white.

11. x. Attilia Augusta, born near Oshawa, Whitby Township, Ontario, Canada, July 11th, 1838. Married Dr. M. D. Rouse, May 30th, 1866. +

Dr. James Hunter was born in Yorkshire, England, on Michaelmas Day, September 29, 1795. The place of his birth is thought to have been Thornton, but this is uncertain. His father died when he was quite young and his mother married again. His stepfather was, evidently, not particularly interested in the welfare of James and his sister Catharine, and they were taken to live with their bachelor uncle, John Hunter, who had been appointed their guardian. We have no record of the names of his parents, nor of any of his family connection, except his uncle John. There was another family of the same name, at this time living in and near the city of Hull, bearing similar given names. Of this family, John was the ancestor of Hunters now living in York County, Canada. This similarity of names, and of place of residence in Yorkshire, would seem to indicate a close family connection with the father of James Hunter, and of his uncle John.

That the mother of James Hunter was living as late as the year 1826 is certain from a letter dated in that year, written from London by his attorney, upon matters of business, which stated that there was now ninety pounds to his credit upon which he could draw, exclusive of ten pounds reserved for his mother, and twenty pounds to be paid in settlement of a debt for publishing a grammer, a work which he seems to have had published.

As a child Dr. Hunter seems to have been very bright, and to have developed unusual business ability for one of his age. He had inherited from his father quite an amount of property for those days, and is said to have been given charge of his own business interests at the early age of twelve. It appears that it had been intended that he should enter the British navy; but, evidently he had no such intention, and ran away from the vessel upon which his guardian had placed him as a midshipman. He was unusually studious, and acquired a fine education. As Dr. Bartlett writes, "All through his life he was a book lover, and an indefatigable student of history and the best literature. Books of travel, and of exploration had an especial fascination for him."

In 1814, at the age of nineteen, James Hunter married Elizabeth Story, a young lady of fine and strong character of the same age, who seems to have been living in, or near Hedon, where Mr. Hunter had opened a school for the preparation of young men for college. Tradition reports that they were married in York Cathedral, and that they were a remarkably fine looking young couple. Miss Story was born at Pocklington, Yorkshire, and was confirmed at York Cathedral. Hedon where James Hunter had opened his school, and where he resided until he left England, was not far from the city of Hull. That this school was successful is evident from the necessity of the employment of several classical teachers; but that Mr. Hunter did not intend this to be his life work is clear from his having taken up the study of medicine, in which he appears to have made good progress, and even to have entered, to some extent, upon the practice of this profession before moving to Canada, for we find in a letter of his attorney, dated October 14th, 1825, assurance that he must be in good health, "when he had taken up the practice of healing again"; yet he did not take his degree in medicine until after he came to Canada.

In 1822, Dr. Hunter sold most of his English property, and in that year, with his wife and three children, emigrated to Canada. The ocean journey was a long and tedious one. They were sixteen weeks in crossing the Atlantic, and reaching their destination. Upon arriving in Canada he first settled at Niagara at the mouth of the Niagara River. While here he engaged in the practice of medicine. Later he moved to Smithville in the Niagara peninsula, where he continued his professional practice. Whether it was during the time of his residence at Niagara, or after his removal to Smithville, that he again took up his medical studies we have no information. He was reported to have graduated at Rolph's School of Medicine," in Toronto, Canada; but this could not be true, as the first medical school in Upper Canada was not opened until the year 1842; and in a biographical sketch in Canniff's "Medical Profession in Upper Canada," Dr. Hunter is said to have passed a "perfectly satisfactory" examination before the Upper Canada Medical Board in 1826, three years before Dr. Rolph passed this examination. It was in the fall of 1825 that Dr. Hunter continued his medical studies at "The College of Physicians and Surgeons" of the Western District of New York, at Fairfield, Herkimer County, and was graduated as Doctor of Medicine, February 3d, 1829. At that time this was a very noted college; it was in affiliation with the University of New York, and flourished for about thirty years, but was finally absorbed by the schools of medicine at Geneva, and at Albany. His Doctor's diploma, and his Fairfield College lecture tickets for the years 1825-1826, and 1828-1829, and also his post-graduate tickets from the "New York Hospital," dated November, 1846, are now in the possession of Dr. G. Hunter Bartlett of Buffalo, New York.

From Smithville Dr. Hunter moved to Whitby Township, Ontario County, where he had purchased property about a mile and a half from the village of Oshawa, where he engaged in farming, as well as carrying on an extensive medical practice. We have no record of the time of this removal, but it must have been very soon after his graduation from Fairfield college, if, indeed he had not made this change of residence before completing his medical course. From an old deed, for the purchase of land, now in the possession of the writer, dated March 7th, 1833, it would seem evident that he had been living in his new home for some time. This deed is for fifty acres of land, being the  $S\frac{1}{2}$  of the  $S\frac{1}{2}$  of Lot 15 in the second concession of the Township of Whitby, purchased from George Cruikshank and James Buchanan, of York (Toronto), York County, executors of the will of the late James Macauley. This was evidently an additional purchase to that upon which Dr. Hunter lived; but whether this fifty acres was a tract of land immediately adjoining the home farm, we have no information. During the early years of Dr. Hunter's residence in this place he became deeply interested in the political conditions of the country, and especially in the political disturbances that finally culminated in 1837 in what is generally known as the "Patriot War," or "Mackenzie Rebellion."

At this time the government of Canada was largely controlled by a political power known as "The Family Compact," for the most part composed of men of empire loyalist descent, men of influence occupying good social and political positions, and sons of officers in the army and navy, chiefly gentlemen in the conventional sense of the term. It came to be called "The Family Compact," because the members of this exclusive party had managed through course of time, and general subserviency to the governors, to monopolize most of the places of power and trust in the government, and were further woven together by frequent intermarriages. In Canada East a similar condition of governmental control, and governmental corruption had long existed, and a corresponding reform movement had reached almost militant proportions, directed by Louis Joseph Papineau, speaker of the legislative assembly, and leader of the radical party, whose list of demands and grievances were known as the ninety-two resolutions. Thus it is evident that the whole country, both East and West, was seriously disturbed by the great movements for reform. This controlling political power of Upper Canada, had been more or less strengthened and directed by certain Lieutenant Governors whose maladministration had tended to increase the dissatisfaction, and wide unrest. When Sir Francis Bond Head arrived as Lieutenant Governor in 1835, he allied himself with this controlling political faction, and of his own authority appointed members of the Compact to fill vacant lucrative offices. In an apparent desire to appease the public he appointed three men who had the full confidence of the country as members of the Executive Council, but ignored them when important public questions were considered, whereupon they soon resigned, as there seemed to be very little hope of the desired reforms.

It seemed somewhat necessary to give this brief reference to the political conditions of the country that finally led to the revolutionary events with which Dr. Hunter was, in some measure, connected.

The recognized leader of the reform movement in Upper Canada was William Lyon Mackenzie. But he was too radical in his methods, and too unwise in his direction of the reform movements to lead to any hope of success. He had published a book entitled "Sketches of Canada and the United States," in which he is reported to have represented Canadian affairs as a falling barometer, soon to end in storm. His prophecy was fulfilled, but largely as a result of his own action, for he soon became the leader of a rebellious movement. He has been represented as "a reformer ahead of his time" and as "the stormy petrel of the ante-rebellion era in Upper Canada." A prominent writer, speaking of his personality, says, that he was "a wiry and peppery little Scotchman, hearty in his love of public right, still more in his hatred of public wrongdoing, clever, brave, and energetic, yet far from being cool-headed, sure-footed in his conduct, temperate in his language, or steadfast in his personal connections." It is certain that his radical and intemperate utterances, and unwise methods antagonized wiser and cooler heads, and led to disastrous results.

Dr. James Hunter was in full sympathy with the reformers, but strongly opposed to the radical methods of Mackenzie, and to any thought of armed resistance. As we have not been able to examine any published works giving an account of the stirring events that culminated in the resort to arms, we are glad to have the following brief account sent me by Dr. G. Hunter Bartlett, of Buffalo, who has given some attention to the subject, and who thus writes of Dr. Hunter's experience. "Grandfather was asked to become a Colonel of a Patriot regiment, but declined, as he said that the contest should be fought out in other ways than by resort to arms, which was utterly foolish and useless against the power of England. He broke his friendship with William Lyon Mackenzie, the leader, definitely, and finally over this point."

Dr. Hunter was one of the nineteen signers of the "Declaration of the Reformers," and a member of the permanent committee of vigilance. He supported the cause of reform ably by both tongue and pen. He was arrested in December, 1837, and forced to march thirty miles to Toronto, and put in jail with some six hundred prominent citizens who had taken part in the agitation, and to whom modern Canada owes a debt of gratitude; and here for a time he was in imminent peril of losing both life and property. He was examined by a commission appointed for this purpose, and, partially owing to the fact that witnesses bribed to testify against him were forced to confess by his lawyer; and partly because he had been opposed to armed resistance, and partly through the aid of powerful friends, he was acquitted.

He is mentioned in "Life and Times of William Lyon Mackenzie," by Charles Lindsey, pp. 334, 342, 363, 367; also in "Story of the Upper Canada Rebellion," by Charles Dent, Vol. I, pp. 365, 367, and Vol. II, pp. 76, 78. There was bravery on both sides of the house in those trying days. When the British troops came to arrest Grandfather, they surrounded the house to prevent his escape, and declared that they would burn it down unless he surrendered. An officer with a file of soldiers marched inside and found Grandmother with a bundle of manuscripts of Grandfather's criticisms of the government in her hands. He told her that unless she handed them over instantly he would give the order to fire. She glanced at the leveled muskets, and turning quickly threw the bundle into the great chimney blaze where it was swallowed up at once. In the surprise the order to fire was never given. This destruction of the original manuscripts of Dr. Hunter's political writings in criticism of the government was a brave act, yet we do not find the name of Elizabeth Hunter among those who have been called "The Deborah's of '37" who have been immortalized in print.

Dr. Hunter was a clear and forcible writer, was possessed of a strong will, of enduring courage, and ever stood for principles of right and justice. Outside of his political writings during the struggle of the "Patriots" and political reformers of 1837, the most important product of his pen was a booklet entitled "Canada as it was, as it is, and as it will be." This was written in verse form, and was of the nature of a vision of the future of the country, even to the opening up of the vast territory of the northwest, and the establishment of its national character, wonderfully realized in the Dominion government, and in the great development westward to the Pacific coast. This work is now but a memory. We have not been able to find a copy, nor to learn of the date of its publication. It was published in the "Era" office, in Newmarket, Canada, during the time of the doctor's residence in that place. As a child, in the early '50's we can remember having seen a copy, and of hearing it spoken of as a dream not likely to be fulfilled. Its apparent flights of fancy in representing the traveler traveling "In carriages without horses" would seem to be but as a dream, or vision of the night, yet how prophetic of the railroads now spanning the continent reaching every important point, if not even of the air-plane crossing from coast to coast in a few hours time.

After his release from political confinement Dr. Hunter moved to Hartland, Niagara County, New York, in the United States, most probably to be away from the dangers attending any one in any way connected with the Canadian political disturbances, and the Patriot War. He remained in Hartland for several years engaged in farming and in the practice of his profession. It was, probably, during this time that he took a post-graduate course at "The New York Hospital." When the turbulent conditions in Canada had somewhat subsided he returned to that country, and resided for about six months in the village of Sharon, in the Township of East Gwiliambury, York County, and then moved to the much larger village of Newmarket, about thirty miles north of Toronto, where he continued the practice of his profession, and built up quite a large and extensive practice. A few years later he turned his practice over to his son James John Hunter, and moved to Brooklin, Ontario County, a few miles north of his old home near Oshawa.

Here he again entered upon the practice of his profession, which became quite extensive, reaching as far north as Port Perry and Uxbridge. During the course of this practice, when on the way to make professional calls, one cold winter night, after a sleet storm, his horse slipped on a piece of wood in the road and threw him, but regaining his feet started off home leaving the doctor lying in the snow with a broken leg. Not being able to obtain assistance, he secured a support from a branch of a tree lying near by, and succeeded in dragging himself along for some distance before his call for help was heard when two men came to his aid, and carried him to a farm house occupied by two women, who (another report says, a man and his wife) took him in, and cared for him. Although suffering severely, and weak from pain and exposure, yet with the assistance of these two women he succeeded in setting his own fractured leg, and after receiving some nourishment rested well until the following day when he was taken to his home; and, as one report says, a doctor was called, but after a careful examination said that there was nothing for him to do as the bones had been admirably set. Another report is that his sons, Robert and William, came to see him and wished to examine his broken leg to see if it was all right, but that he refused, informing them that it was all right, which proved to be true, as there was no evidence of any injury of any character after his full recovery. Both of these reports may be correct, for a doctor's examination may have been made before the arrival of Dr. Hunter's sons.

Soon after his recovery, Dr. Hunter took a trip westward through the United States, accompanied by his son William. This trip extended as far as the gold fields of California, probably induced by the gold fever with which so many were afflicted upon the gold discoveries of 1848 and 1849. We have not been able to obtain information of the time of this trip, nor any report of the trip further than that the Doctor returned alone by way of Central America, and there followed somewhat the course of travel of Baron Humboldt, the great naturalist, and when, tradition reports, he visited the historic ruins of Guatemala and Yucatan, the origin of which has never yet been clearly established, although they are generally regarded as the ruins of ancient cities of the Mayas, found here by the Spaniards in the 16th century. While in this Central American country, the doctor found great difficulty in communicating with the natives, he therefore purchased a Spanish grammar and proceeded to study the language; his success was sufficient to enable him to get along without much difficulty.

It was probably soon after his return from this western trip, or about the year 1851, that he visited his relatives in England.

On his return in the summer of that year he had an experience which is thus reported by Dr. George Hunter Bartlett, of Buffalo, who has the doctor's medical book in which it is recorded. "On his return, being alone, he accepted the position of surgeon on the ship Kalamazoo, a sailing vessel, for the voyage, in consideration of being given a cabin passage. The captain, appropriately named Savage, was a brute, and ordered Dr. Hunter to assist him in abusing the sailors by drugging them. Grandfather promptly refused to obey, and the captain charged him with mutiny, locked him in his cabin, and tried to force him into submission by half starving him, and by threatening that he would never see land. Dr. Hunter thought that he would be thrown overboard some dark night, but he would not yield. He had some medical books with him and, in one of these, Wagner's "Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals," he wrote the story of the captain's abuse and threats, day by day, in the form of marginal notes. He knew that if he were reported by the captain as having been lost at sea, his books and other luggage would be forwarded to his home, and he trusted that some day the notes in his book would tell the story of his fate, and bring the brutal officer to justice. He knew that the captain would destroy any ordinary written statement he might leave, but that he would not be likely to notice marginal notes in a medical book. The captain, however, did not dare to carry out his threats, and although Grandfather never gave in, he landed safely in New York."

During the later years of Dr. Hunter's residence in Brooklin, and probably after his return from his western trip, he became more particularly interested in farming and lumbering; and having received the appointment as magistrate for his district, a portion of his time was taken up with the duties of this office. Thus he had little time for leisure. As magistrate, his administration of his office was vigorous, wise, and just.

At this time there was a large and wide-spread organization of horse thieves generally known as the "Markham Gang," and the "Black-leg Gang," operating extensively, and boldly in this section of the country, and stretching up into York County in the direction of Sharon and Queensville, and westward, and apparently working in connection with, if not a part of, a similar organization in the United States extending toward the north-west into Minnesota. Doctor Hunter, as magistrate came into contact with this organization, and in obedience to the nature of his constitution, was relentless in his determination to break up the "gang." He followed them, step by step, often at the risk of his life, until he was at last able to see the fruits of his vigorous prosecution of the leaders in the conviction of the last criminal. Between Brooklin and North York there was a long stretch of timber land known as the "big woods" through which the Doctor, as magistrate, had, at times to pass, and where it was regarded as being far from safe for him to travel.

The writer of these notes, as a child, once passed through this long dense timber district with his Grandfather, the Doctor, but somewhat in fear, having heard the family speak of attempts that appeared to have been made upon the Doctor's life. But the Doctor knew no fear; yet he never sought danger, and was ever careful to secure, as far as possible his own safety. Later years revealed the fact that his enemies had greater fear of him than he ever had of them.

About the year 1856, Dr. Hunter moved to Lewiston, New York, a village at the head of navigation on the Niagara River, where he purchased a home, and a small fruit farm about a mile and a half east of the village on the Ridge Road. During his residence in Lewiston he was deeply interested in the political conditions of the country, especially as they had to do with the question of slavery, the most disturbing political question of that time. He largely devoted his time to recording, in verse, his views of the distressing conditions, and the inevitable fruits of their continuance. Some of these writings were later published in a booklet, entitled, "Poems on America; a Delineation of the causes that produced the present unhappy Civil War, by a Candid observer," and was dedicated "To my Country."

This was published soon after Lincoln became President, and is a bitter criticism of Buchanan's administration, of slavery, and of secession. It represents, what may be termed, the writer's uncompromising abhorrence of slavery, and the character of those who upheld that institution. In the preface to this publication, the author says, "The political and moral aspect of these poems are chiefly gathered from the events of the administration of Franklin Pierce, and James Buchanan, and only in a few instances refer to that of Lincoln. . . . The author belongs to no political party. He only professes to love what is good, and to abhor what is evil."

Dr. Hunter became a strong admirer of President Lincoln. He was admitted as a naturalized citizen of the United States on April 5th, 1864, having taken out his first papers in 1838 when he first left Canada, and resided at Hartland, after the trouble resulting from the Patriot War. Both papers, the application of 1838, and the final paper of 1864, are now in the possession of Dr. Bartlett of Buffalo.

Dr. Hunter had a fine personality. As Dr. Bartlett writes; "He was a fine type of the English gentleman in both looks and manner. An insatiable student of the best literature, and a conversationalist of marked ability. When a boy, I remember a most vivid account that he gave one evening, off hand, of the battle of Waterloo. There was nothing of the heavy insular ordinary type of Englishman about him. Perhaps his Scotch ancestry had something to do with it. He was a passionate lover of truth, and of fair play, impulsive, fearless, and, at times, headstrong—an ardent and sensitive man, aroused to quick indignation by accounts of cruelty or oppression. As a business man he was too impulsive to be a great success, but Grandmother was an excellent manager."

After the death of Elizabeth, the wife of Dr. Hunter, in 1863, he sold his home at Lewiston, to his son Edwin, and moved into the village of Lewiston where he lived for about a year. From Lewiston he moved to Ann Arbor, Michigan.

It was about this time that he married Elizabeth Hunter of Prince Albert, Ontario, Canada, a person of the same family name, yet not a kinswoman. He continued to live in Ann Arbor until shortly before his death which occurred in Buffalo in 1875 at the home of his son-in-law, Dr. F. W. Bartlett, at about eighty years of age. His burial was in Dr. Bartlett's family lot in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Buffalo. Elizabeth Hunter, the second wife of Dr. Hunter, died at Kalamazoo, Michigan, at the great age of nearly ninety-eight years.

Elizabeth (Story) Hunter, the first wife of Dr. Hunter, was a woman of unusually fine character. We can consistently record what we have often heard said of her, that "she was one of the best of women."

A home mother of loving spirit, of calm balanced judgment, and of true Christian principle. Dr. Bartlett thus writes of her, "My father, who tendered to her the devotion of a son, used to speak of her as the best woman that God ever made, and he selected the text upon her grave stone, a text familiar, yet never used more appropriately—'Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband, also, and he praiseth her.' Her burial was in the cemetery in the village of Lewiston, New York.

Dr. Hunter was imbued with the democratic spirit of his times and set little store on family connections. He came to Canada with the intention of making his own way in the new world and was happy in his success in acquiring financial independence through his investments and medical practice. Grandmother's assistance and advice were of great value to him in his business affairs. It is said that his uncle John in England, once asked for the names of his daughters, so that he might remember them in his will, only to be told by the Doctor that he was abundantly able to take care of them himself. Those pioneer days were full and busy ones, people gave little thought to matters of genealogy and no one thought of questioning him about the family connections until it was too late. An examination of the English records should show Grandfather's pedigree. Such an examination was planned by the late Ernest Howard Hunter but was prevented by his untimely death in 1916.

The Story family from which Grandmother came is very well known in Yorkshire and Trinity Church in the city of Hull, contains many memorials bearing that name.

The Rev. Robert Darlington was a native of Wicklow county, Ireland. At the time of his marriage he was a local Methodist minister, and was engaged in mercantile business. In 1840 he entered into the full work of the ministry, and continued for about eight years, when his health failing he retired from active ministerial work, and settled in Brooklin, Ontario county, when he again entered upon a business life; and, later, received the appointment of postmaster. Mr. Darlington was a man of fine intellectual culture, a courteous gentleman of pleasing manner, and of rigid business and official integrity. He died in Brooklin in 1881 at nearly seventy-four years of age.

3. EDWIN HUNTER.—Son of Dr. James Hunter (1) and Elizabeth Story. Born at Hedon, Yorkshire, England, December 28th, 1818. In 1865 he married Hannah Cook, daughter of John Cook, Deputy Registrar at Newmarket. Died December 25th, 1893, and was buried in the family burial lot in the Newmarket cemetery. His wife, Hannah, married again a few years after his death. She died July 20th, 1916, and was buried in the Edwin Hunter family burial lot in the Newmarket cemetery. Children:

16. i. James Albert, born July 24th, 1843. Married Louisiana M. Hernandez of New Orleans, September 3d, 1885. His wife died in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1886. March 17th, 1892, he married Martha Lavinia Hobson, at Dallas, Texas. †

19. iv. Robert William, born August 26th, 1853. Married Mary Hull, of Lewiston, N. Y., December 27th, 1876. †

Children by second wife:

20. v. Frederick Arthur, born September 22d, 1870. Died August 25th, 1882.
21. vi. Charles Douglas Campbell, born September 16th, 1879. Married Mabel Jane Manhardt of Toronto, Canada, December 14, 1899. Married, second, Charlotte Ann Wilder, of Minot, N. Dakota, June 14th, 1906. †

Edwin Hunter, as a young man, entered mercantile life, for a time, in preference to the medical profession as desired by his father, and towards which his education had been directed. But after his marriage he engaged in farming for some years near his old home at Oshawa, Ontario, Canada. This farm was of only fifty acres, and owned by his father. The soil was light and unproductive for the labor expended, and was therefore undesirable. Having obtained a clear title he sold this farm, and moved to Union street, East Gwiliambury, York county, where he purchased the East 100 acres of lot No. 5 in the Third Concession, and where he lived until about a year after the death of his wife Eliza. In the fall of 1860 he rented his farm, and moved to the home of his father, at Lewiston, Niagara county, N. Y., where he lived for several years; but, later, he returned to Newmarket, Ontario, near his old home farm, and in 1865 married Hannah Cook of Newmarket, in which place he lived for a time, and then moved to a farm that he had purchased on the N. W. corner of Yonge street and the town line, about a mile west of Newmarket. Here he erected a home, and farm buildings throughout, and lived until his death.

Edwin Hunter was always deeply interested in local school matters, and in questions affecting general as well as local political interests, but never took an active part in politics. He was devoted to his farming interests, and conducted his farm operations according to principles similar to those now termed "scientific," and so strongly commended by the government agricultural department.

4. JAMES JOHN HUNTER.—Son of Dr. James Hunter (1) and Elizabeth Story. Born at Hedon, Yorkshire, England, January 4th, 1821. Married Rachael Lundy of Whitchurch, York county, Ontario, Canada, in 1845. Died January 11th, 1899. Rachael, his wife, died May 25th, 1905. Both are buried in Newmarket cemetery. Children:
22. i. Louisa, born November 6th, 1846. Married Edward Clark Campbell, of Newmarket, March 30th, 1865. Died August 17th, 1918. +
  23. ii. Mary Emily, born July 28th, 1848. Married Martin Heaton, July 16th, 1870. +
  24. iii. James Wilmott Lundy, born February 13th, 1859. Married Charlotte Elizabeth Copeland, June 24th, 1885. Died January 7th, 1896. +

Dr. James Hunter was, for some years, a practicing physician in Newmarket, having succeeded to the practice of his father, when his father moved to Brooklin, Ontario county. He was also deeply interested in local politics, and served several terms as Reeve of Newmarket, and as a member of the county council. For a time, later, he was associated with his brother, Robert, in the United States, in the special practice of diseases of the respiratory organs by inhalation of medicated vapor, etc. After separating from his brother, he continued this practice, chiefly in Chicago, Illinois; but, finally, he gave up all regular practice, and devoted his time, chiefly, to lumbering and farming in the township of Whitchurch, York county, Ontario, Canada. His last place of residence was Lemonville, where both he and his wife died. Both are buried in Newmarket cemetery.

5. WILLIAM HUNTER.—Son of Dr. James Hunter (1) and Elizabeth Story. Born in Canada, probably at Niagara, March 20th, 1823. Married Jane Hunter about 1846. Died about the year 1864. His wife, Jane, died February 1st, 1860. Children:
25. i. Josephine, born in January, 1848. Married Col. Delos Phillips of Kalamazoo, Michigan, December 25th, 1885. Died in Grand Rapids, Michigan, October 1st, 1919. Her husband, Col. Phillips, died in 1886.

26. ii. Eugene, who died quite early in life, but no information could be obtained of the date of birth, or of death.

William Hunter was a physician by profession, and practiced, for a time, at Rochester, Minnesota. He was somewhat of a rover, and never confined himself either to the practice of medicine, or to any business interests. This roving disposition was, possibly, a result of his experience in the gold fields of California, to which he accompanied his father upon the occasion of his father's western trip. For a time he was interested in lumbering in one of his father's mills in Ontario county. When gold was discovered in the vicinity of Pike's Peak in Colorado, he followed the rush to that district. His return was supposed to have been by way of New Orleans, where he is thought to have died during a yellow fever epidemic, about the year 1864, although neither the place, nor time of his death, are clearly known. The wife of Dr. William Hunter died at the residence of Dr. James Hunter, at Lewiston, N. Y., February 1st, 1860, and was buried in the cemetery in that village.

6. ROBERT HUNTER.—Son of Dr. James Hunter (1) and Elizabeth Story. Born in Canada, June 17th, 1825. Married Sarah Barton, daughter of King Barton and Mary Munns of Dundas, Canada, November 14th, 1846. He died quite suddenly from an attack of angina pectoris at his summer camp, at Bald Point, Lake Scugog, Ontario county, Canada, on the 29th of July, 1899. Sarah, his wife, died March 23d, 1903. Children:

27. i. King Barton, born in Toronto, Canada, in 1848. Married Olivia Henrietta Lewis, of Ottawa, Canada, February 18th, 1869. His wife, Olivia, died in 1882. He married, second, Annie Keefe, of Chicago. †
28. ii. Elizabeth Alice Augusta, born in Canada, in 1850. Died in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1870, and was buried there.
29. iii. Robert James Orby, born in Canada, June 27th, 1852. Married Amy Hamilton of Chicago, October 11th, 1879. †
30. iv. Edwin William, born in New York, January 9th, 1855. He never married. †
31. v. Rudolph Melville, born in New York, June 20th, 1856. Married Emilie Phillips, August — 1879. †
32. vi. Frederick William, born March 11th, 1858. Married Anita Colgrove Baxter, August 29th, 1896. †
33. vii. Blanche Marie Isabel, born December 16th, 1861. Married Louis Morgan Porter, October 18th, 1887. †

DR. ROBERT HUNTER

SARAH BARTON HUNTER
Wife of Dr. Robert Hunter.

34. viii. Ernest Howard, born September 1st, 1864. Married Mary Scull Reeves, of Phoenixville, Pa., June 24th, 1891. +

The names of four other children are remembered by members of the family—Malcolm, Victor, Helena Maud, Rosalie Namie—who died in infancy; but there is no record of time of birth or of death.

Dr. Robert Hunter was born in Canada, probably at Niagara, at the mouth of the Niagara River, where his father first settled upon his arrival in Canada, from England. He received his early education in Canada, and later in New York. In 1842 he entered the Medical College at Geneva, New York, and spent three years in the study of medicine, graduating at the New York University on the 4th day of March, 1846. Subsequently he took advanced courses in London and Paris. After about five years devoted to general practice in Canada, he settled down to the special treatment of diseases of the throat and lungs. During the course of his medical studies, and practice, he had given special attention to the causes, and the treatment, of all diseases of the respiratory organs. In 1853 he returned to New York, where for several years he continued the treatment of these diseases. About 1857 he moved to Ottawa, Canada, and resided for some years at his country home just outside of the city, and known as "Rockcliffe." In 1861 he sold his Rockcliffe home, and moved to Toronto, Canada, where he again took up the practice of his profession. In 1863 he closed his Toronto office, and returned to New York. In 1864 he again moved, this time to London, England, where he opened an office on Upper Seymour Street, and continued to practice until 1866, when he returned to New York, and again established himself in practice. Later, he had offices in St. Louis, Missouri; St. Paul, Minnesota, and Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1871, Dr. Hunter moved to Chicago, Illinois, where he continued his special practice until 1889, when he again returned to New York and continued his practice in that city until his death.

Dr. Hunter wrote extensively upon diseases of the throat and lungs, and invented inhaling instruments that bear his name.

Early in the 'seventies the state of New York offered a prize of $100,000.00 for the best method of propelling canal boats by steam on the Erie canal. Dr. Robert Hunter took great interest in this. He was unable to give his personal time to the matter, but at large personal expense he caused his engineers to fit up two boats with ingenious devices of his own to compete for the prize. One of these novel devices was made on the idea of a fish tail. It propelled the boat successfully, but was found to cause too much wash on the banks of the canal. The other and better device consisted of a pair of paddle wheels set vertically at the stern of the boat with four feathering blades each.

The feathering could be so controlled that the boat could be steered in any desired direction without a rudder, and even driven backward without reversing the engine.

This ingenious invention proved a practical success but unfortunately the judges, while admitting the excellence of the boat's performance, thought the gear mechanism too liable to get out of order in the hands of an ordinary canal boat crew and the prize was ultimately given to a device employing an ordinary screw propeller.

On the death of King Barton Hunter's wife Olivia, Robert Hunter and his wife took the four children and brought them up as their own.

Sarah, the wife of Dr. Hunter, lived, after his death, with her son Robert James Orby, in Chicago, until her death.

7. ELIZABETH HUNTER.—Daughter of Dr. James Hunter (1) and Elizabeth Story. Born August 21st, 1828. Married Dr. John Edward Ware of Brooklin, Ontario county, Canada, December 25th, 1846. After the death of his mother in 1844, he moved to Brooklin, Ontario county, where he opened a drug store, and where in 1848 he was appointed deputy postmaster. During this time he took up the study of medicine, and attended lectures at the University of Buffalo, from which he graduated February 27th, 1850. He was a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, and practiced medicine for twenty-five years in Prince Albert, Port Perry, and vicinity, and for twenty years in Orillia. Later, Dr. Ware left Orillia, and moved to New York city, where he was associated with Dr. Robert Hunter until the death of Dr. Hunter in 1899, when he moved to Flushing, New York, residing there until his death, December 30th, 1900. Dr. Ware was a member of the Free Masons of Canada, and of the Sons of England Benevolent Society, of which he was medical advisor of Rose Lodge of Couchiching for many years. In 1858 Dr. Ware married Sarah O'Dell Brown of Port Perry, who died in New York in 1897.

ADELIA HUNTER BARTLETT

8. ADELIA HUNTER.—Daughter of Dr. James Hunter (1) and Elizabeth Story. Born near Oshawa, Ontario county, Ontario, Canada, December 24th, 1829. Married Dr. Frederic W. Bartlett in New York city, December 28th, 1854, by the Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, D.D., Rector of St. George's Church. Died January 20th, 1902, at the residence of her son, in Buffalo, New York, and was buried in the family lot in Forest Lawn cemetery. Dr. Bartlett died March 17th, 1897. Children:

37. i. George (Frederic) Hunter, born in Buffalo, May 24th, 1856. Married Alice Mary Evans, of Buffalo, April 18th, 1883. +
 38. ii. Daisy Lillian, born in Buffalo, November 11th, 1865. Died September 22d, 1868.

Dr. Bartlett, and bride, came to Buffalo, New York, in March, 1855, where the Doctor practiced his profession until the illness that resulted in his death, a period of over forty years. He was born in Kingston, Massachusetts, in 1826. Here he received his early education, but, later attended the Normal School at Bridgewater. He taught school for a time, and in 1845, when only nineteen years of age, took charge of Lafayette Academy near Jeffersonville, Georgia. He was originally intended for the ministry, but gave up thought of this, apparently feeling that his vocation was along other lines of activity. In 1846 he became proprietor and publisher of the "Atlanta Luminary"; but two years later returned north, and in company with Thomas Drew Stetson, published the "Old Colony Reporter," at Bridgeport, Mass. In 1849 he sold his interest in the paper, and the following year went to New York, and entered upon the study of medicine. During the course of his studies he formed the partnership of "Bartlett and Muygridge" in the book business, which continued for about a year. In 1854 he graduated from the New York Medical College (afterwards Bellevue Hospital Medical College), receiving the degree of M.D. and then took a course at Albany, N. Y. Medical College.

Dr. Bartlett was an unusually skillful and successful practicing physician, and an able writer upon medical subjects. During his long residence in Buffalo he held a number of important official positions. In 1884 he was president of the Buffalo Medical and Surgical Association. From 1889 to 1891, president of the Polytechnic Institute of Buffalo; in 1893 and 1894, president of the Buffalo Physicians Protective Association; trustee of the Academy of Medicine, 1893 to 1896; vice-president of the Medical Society of the County of Erie, and its president in 1895. He was consulting physician to the Buffalo Hospital of the Sisters of Charity in 1895. Among his many published writings, we may mention, a paper on diphtheria, which was re-published in foreign journals; a paper on the treatment of epizootic; a paper on the treatment of cerebro-spinal meningitis; a paper on the treatment of dysentery; a paper on accidental hemorrhage; a paper on scarlet fever. He also constructed an instrument for the generation of ozone in the treatment of zymotic diseases. Throughout his professional life, Dr. Bartlett ever seemed to be deeply interested in the welfare of his fellow creatures. He could be justly classed with the good Samaritans. He was ever ready to respond to the call for his services, even at the midnight hour, though knowing full well that, in many cases, the accustomed medical fee could not be paid. The writer of this record has, at times, accompanied him upon these night trips, and, upon one occasion, when the Doctor appeared to be in a reminiscent mood, he was heard to say, "O, how many there are in this world who do not seem to be willing to give even the glass of cold water." Dr. Bartlett was descended from sixteen Mayflower passengers, and through twenty lines, two of these being from Elder William Brewster, also from Captain Miles Standish, John and Priscilla Alden, and others.

Adelia, the wife of Dr. Bartlett, was a woman of strong and splendid character, having many fine characteristics inherited from her parents. She was devoted to her home, and had rather a retiring disposition. She has been called "A Mother in Israel," as was her mother before her. There were many who had reason to remember her guiding hand during their youthful days, and to whom her memory was as a sacred trust.

There is a memorial window in St. Paul's Cathedral (Episcopal), Buffalo, to Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Bartlett and their daughter, Daisy. A bell inscribed with their names has also been added to the chime.

9. MARIAH HUNTER.—Daughter of Dr. James Hunter (1) and Elizabeth Story. Born March 11th, 1833. Married John Checkly Brathwaite, in Ann Arbor, Michigan, December 27th, 1864. 39. i. Frederic Malcolm, born September 22d, 1865. Died in California, June 21st, 1900. †

Mr. Brathwaite was a citizen of Toronto, Canada, and an artist of unusual ability; but after coming to the United States he studied medicine, and for a short time practiced his profession; but his health failing, after his wife's death, he went south, and later married again. Here he took up the study of theology, and entered the ministry of the Episcopal Church. He died at Jacksonville, Florida, August 11th, 1869, and was buried there.

He studied medicine in Toronto, passing the Medical Board of Examiners, and was licensed to practice in 1865. Practiced for a time, in the office of his uncle, Dr. Robert Hunter, in Cincinnati, Ohio, who had an extensive practice in diseases of the throat and lungs. Later, he went to San Francisco, California, where he continued to practice for some years. From San Francisco, he went to Europe for advanced study, and attended lectures at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Edinburgh, Scotland, and the University of Brussels, Belgium; from each of which he received Diplomas of graduation, as, also from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, Canada, all of which evidences of skill and efficiency, have received the endorsement of the University of the State of New York, and the Boards of Examiners of other States. Returning from Europe in 1883, Dr. Hunter again entered upon the practice of his profession, practicing in New Orleans, and in Dallas, Texas.

Dr. Hunter's practice was specially directed to the treatment of diseases of the ear, nose, throat, lungs and heart. During the course of his practice, he constructed various forms of apparatus for the generation and administration of oxygen, medicated vapors, etc. In addition to his medical practice, Dr. Hunter was, also, an extensive writer upon medical subjects.

Louisiana Hernandez, the wife of Dr. Hunter, and whose married life was of such short duration, was of an old Spanish-French family, prominent in the business and social life of New Orleans.

Martha Lavinia Hobson, the second wife of Dr. Hunter, was of an old prominent family of Virginia. She is quite famous as a writer of poems and short stories. A poem written by her, during the late "world's war," entitled, "Grant Us Peace," was awarded a gold medal; another, entitled, "America to France," was honored by a letter from the secretary of the celebrated French Academy, thanking her for her beautiful tribute to France. She is an active member of the Dallas pen-women's organization, and a member of the League of American Pen-Women. She is now interested in preparing the material for a volume of historical poems for publication. A note, prefacing a notice of Mrs. Hunter, in a Dallas paper, says, "Martha Lavinia Hunter is a teacher of English and classical literature, being a Greek and Latin scholar, as well as conversant with ancient and modern literary forms. She is a leader of the Stratford Club, editor of the 'Dallas Pen-Women,' poet-laureate Daughters of the Confederacy, and head of the literature department of the Woodrow School of Elocution. In the spring of 1872 he entered upon a course of study for the ministry of the Episcopal church, at Seabury Divinity School, at Faribault, Minnesota, from which he graduated in June, 1876, with the degree of B.D. Was ordained to the Diaconate June 18th, 1876, by Bishop Whipple of The Diocese of Minnesota, and entered upon missionary work in the western Minnesota missionary field. During the two years of work in this field services were held at many widely separated points, among which may be mentioned, Marshal, Redwood Falls, Granite Falls, Montivideo, Lac Qui Parle, Sleepy Eye, etc. At that early day the means of communication from place to place was very uncertain, especially in the winter season. This lack of means of travel frequently required that trips had to be made on foot, sometimes to a distance of thirty and forty miles over the prairie. On the second of February, 1877, he was advanced to the Priesthood at St. Peter, Minnesota, by Bishop Whipple. After his marriage in 1878, he was transferred to Janesville, Minnesota, a missionary field embracing Waterville, Okaman, Elysian, etc., where he remained for five years. Subsequently he held charges at Cannelton and Indianapolis, Indiana; Louisville, Kentucky, and Talladega, Alabama. During the greater part of the year 1917, he had temporary charge of Trinity Church, Mobile, Alabama, retiring in the fall of that year from active work, having served continuously for over forty years. But though having retired from regular parish work, yet he frequently responded to calls for services for greater or less periods of time. For eleven years Mr. Hunter was a member of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Indiana, and its president for eight years, and until he moved from the Diocese to Louisville, Kentucky. Was Dean of the Central Convocation for six years; and, as president of the Standing Committee, was, largely, the administrator of the Diocese during the interim after the death of Bishop Knickerbacker, and presided at the Council that elected Bishop White, the successor of Bishop Knickerbacker. For a time was editor of the "Church Worker," the Diocesan paper; was the author of "Brief Answers to Questions," "The Church in the Reformation," "A Chart Illustrating the Divine Dispensation," etc. During one school year, he also gave a course of studies to a class at Knickerbacker Hall, a girls' school in Indianapolis, upon the origin, structure, and contents of the Bible. Robert James Orby Hunter attended the schools at Witchurch, and Edmonton, England, and at Monteville, near Havre, France, remaining in the latter place about a year, when he returned to New York, his father having closed his office in London, and returned to New York to again take up his practice in that city. Later, Orby devoted himself to the study of law, and continued his studies in St. Louis, in St. Paul, and Cincinnati, during the time of his father's residence in those cities. In 1871, his father having moved to Chicago, he entered the law office of Judd and Whitehouse in that city. After his marriage in 1879, he moved to Kansas City, Mo., where he engaged in the insurance business, though also devoting some time to real estate interests. Later, returning to Chicago, he continued the insurance business under the firm name of Pellett and Hunter; and, as general agents built up a very large business. His death, which occurred but a little beyond middle life, was, largely, a result of his untiring devotion to his business interests.

30. EDWIN WILLIAM HUNTER.—Son of Dr. Robert Hunter (6) and Sarah Barton. Born in New York, January 9th, 1855. He never married. Attended schools at Witchurch, and at Edmonton, England, and for a year at Monteville, near Havre, France. Returning to New York in 1869, he went from there to Toronto, Canada, where, for a year, he attended Upper Canada College. During the time of his father's residence in Cincinnati, Edwin took a course in a business college, and went into the commission business. In 1871 he went to Chicago, when his father and family moved to that city, and took up the study of medicine at Rush Medical College, from which he graduated February 21st, 1877. For a time he was connected with the West Side Free Dispensary, Chicago, and attended several terms in the Chicago Post Graduate School, for special study in all branches, including surgical operations. Dr. Hunter is now practicing his profession in Chicago.

31. RUDOLPH MELVILLE HUNTER.—Son of Dr. Robert Hunter (6) and Sarah Barton. Born in New York, June 20th, 1856. Married Emilie Phillips of Pittsburgh, Pa., August — 1879. Now living in Philadelphia, Pa. Children:

97. i. Rudolph Harding, born August 7th, 1880. Married Genevieve Baldwin Wright, May 15th, 1915. +

ROBERT JAMES ORBY HUNTER

98. ii. Robert Melville, born February 19th, 1882. Married Adah Carrigan, July 3d, 1914. +
99. iii. Gladys Marguerite, born March 29th, 1890. Married Frank L. B. DeSilver, September 25th, 1913. +

Rudolph Hunter was educated at Witchurch and Edmonton, England, Monteville near Havre, France, and Upper Canada College, Toronto, and the Polytechnic College of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in 1878 with the highest honors in mechanical and electrical engineering. During the seven years before he had obtained his college degree he had been interested in patents and engineering, and in various branches of iron and steel work, in Cincinnati, Ohio, Ironton, Ohio, Chicago, Illinois, and Philadelphia, Pa. Establishing his business in Philadelphia, he has continued to reside there to the present time. His wife, Emilie Phillips, was the daughter of Dr. Samuel Phillips, an eminent surgeon of Pittsburgh, Pa.

As a mechanical and electrical engineer, inventor, and scientist of original research, Rudolph Hunter is internationally prominent. Throughout his many years of engineering he has combined it with a patent practice. As inventor and patentee, he stands third or fourth in the world. His patents are fundamental, covering, among other things, the electric railway (trolley, conduit, and accumulator systems), the transformer system of electrical transmission (both method and means for transmission with reduction of potential, as well as the combined "step up" and "step down" system now universally used), and the electric welding system.

He invented and constructed the first modern moving-picture machine in 1894, and had the first moving-picture exhibition hall in the country. In 1874, and on, was engaged in building iron and steel plants in Ohio, Kentucky, and West Virginia; was engineer to Olive Foundry and Machine works of Ironton, Ohio, and consulting engineer in Chicago in 1876; was organizer, secretary, and director of the Atlantic and Pacific Mfg. Co., in 1879; President in 1885 of the Globe Manufacturing Co.; Director in Hunter Electric Co. in 1886-87; President of Electric Car Co. of America in 1887; a Director in 1898 of the General Electric Automobile Co.; a Director in 1899 of the Tractor Truck Co.; President in 1902 of the Mirabile Corp.; President of the U. S. Assay and Bullion Co. in 1903; Director in the Acetylene Light, Heat and Power Co. in 1902; of the Electric Vehicle Co. in 1906; of the Herr Automatic Press Co., and others.

In expert capacity, Mr. Hunter has been retained by many corporations, among them, the General Electric Co. for twenty-one years; the Victor Talking Machine Co. for seventeen years; the Dentist Supply Co. for ten years; and, also, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., the National Cable Railway Co., the United Gas Improvement Co., the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., and others. In 1879-81 Mr. Hunter developed a submarine vessel, published in 1882 an illustrated pamphlet fully describing it, and in 1883 submitted the invention to the British Government. He developed a smokeless powder, and made tests for the French Government in 1883-84. In May, 1883, he placed before the British Parliament his plans for an electric railway for use in the proposed Dover and Calais tunnel. He gave demonstration of his submarine to the chief of the torpedo service of Great Britain in 1884, and to members of the U. S. Congress in 1885.

The inventions of Mr. Hunter have been controlled by many corporations, among which are the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., the General Electric Co., and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., which owned and controlled, or were licensed under three hundred patents; the Electric Car Co. of America, about one hundred and fifty patents; the General Electric Automobile Co., about seventy patents; the Tractor Co., eight patents; the International Power Co., seventy-two patents, and many other companies and individuals who have used, and are using his patents in many and varied industries. His earliest invention was a machine for making Tambor Lace, in 1868. He regards as the greatest of all his works, that of original research, carried on since 1903, relative to the breaking down and reconstruction of atomic matter, including the transmutation of the elements. His work in this direction has been extensively referred to by the press. He describes the result of his work, which has enabled him to transmute one character of atom into another, quite fully; but for the purposes of this Genealogical Record, it is not necessary that we record this process of transmutation, although it has an interesting and instructive value. The attention of Mr. Hunter in this study and investigation was especially directed to the production of gold from silver, or the baser metals, a study that has claimed the attention of some of the world's greatest chemists for generations past. He seems to have reached results that warrant him in claiming the discovery of a process whereby he can impress upon silver, certain conditions that will result in a growing process that will produce gold in such quantities that it may be separated by refining.

Sir William Ramsay, the great chemist of England, was in touch with Mr. Hunter in this work, and had samples of the growing gold, and made corroborative analyses in respect of some of his his tests.

Mr. Hunter is a member of the Manufacturer's Club of Philadelphia; a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, since

RUDOLPH MELVILLE HUNTER

1884; a foundation member of the Société Internationale des Electriciens of Paris, and of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

32. FREDERICK WILLIAM HUNTER.—Son of Dr. Robert Hunter (6) and Sarah Barton. Born at the “Rockcliffe” home of his parents, Ottawa, Canada, March 11th, 1858. Married Anita Colgrove Baxter of New York City, August 29th, 1896. Died, 1902. His wife, Anita, at last report, was living in New York City. Children:

100. i. Henry Heywood was the only child, born at Cranford, New Jersey, May 9th, 1899.

Frederick William attended school at Edmonton, England, at Monteville, near Havre, France, and at Upper Canada College, Toronto. In 1870 he returned from Canada to Cincinnati, Ohio, where his father was then living. After his father moved to Chicago in 1871, Frederick studied law for a time, but later went to Kansas City, and from there to St. Paul, Minn., where in 1882 he entered the commission business. In 1884 he was associated with his brother Rudolph in building the first apartment houses in that city. From St. Paul he moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, and continued the commission business; but later, he moved to New York, where for a time he was interested in brokerage, then became identified with the General Electric Co. Moving to Nashville, Tenn., he undertook the re-organization of the Overland Railroad Company. Later he engaged in business in Philadelphia, and New York. After his marriage he built a home at Cranford, New Jersey, where he lived until his death.

33. BLANCHE MARIE ISABEL HUNTER.—Daughter of Dr. Robert Hunter (6) and Sarah Barton. Born December 30th, 1861. Married Louis Morgan Porter, October 18, 1887. Our only information of her education is of her attendance at school in Cincinnati, Ohio, during the time of her father’s residence in that city. But she had a very fine education, and especially excelled in vocal and instrumental music. She had a lovely voice that had been carefully cultivated. A beautiful girl, of fine character, of social charm, and of many accomplishments. Mr. Porter was a graduate of Yale College, and engaged in a business that took him to London, England, where his wife died in 1902. Her burial was in Philadelphia, Pa., by the side of her father. There were no children.

Although well supplied with names she was seldom called by any of them but was always known as “Bonnie” and was the first of the Hunters so called.

34. ERNEST HOWARD HUNTER.—Son of Dr. Robert Hunter (6) and Sarah Barton. Born in London, England, September 1st, 1864. Married Mary Scull Reeves of Phoenixville, Pa., June 24th, 1891. Died January 22d, 1916. His wife, Mary, now living in Philadelphia, Pa. Children:

- 104. iv. Alfred Reeves, born November 5th, 1898. +
- 105. v. Barton Howard, born March 6th, 1906. +
- 106. vi. Mary Reeves, born February 10th, 1908.

There were two children, Ernest Howard, and Morgan Edwin Orby, who died in infancy. We have not been able to obtain dates of birth or of death.

Ernest Hunter's early education has not been reported, so we have no information of his student life until his attendance at Yale College, and his graduation in 1885, with the degree of A.B. He studied law for a time in Chicago; but later, went to Philadelphia, Pa., and was in the office of his brother Rudolph, and attended the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating in 1887, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and was admitted to practice. He became associated with, and ultimately a partner of his brother Rudolph, with whom he continued until shortly before his death in January, 1916. During the course of his law practice, he specialized in patent law, and practiced in United States District Court of Pennsylvania, United States Court of Appeals, and the United States Supreme Court. DR. ROBERT HUNTER

From a photograph taken about 1865.

DR. EDWIN WILLIAM HUNTER

Son of Dr. Robert Hunter. This photograph was taken about 1891.

Adelia Henrietta was only about two years old when her mother died, and she was taken to live with her grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Hunter, at Brooklin, Canada, and with whom she continued to live until her marriage in Ann Arbor. We have no record of the time of the death of her husband, but after the breaking up of her home in Ann Arbor, she went to live with her Uncle and Aunt, Dr. and Mrs. Bartlett, in Buffalo, New York, and continued with them until the death of Dr. Bartlett, when Mrs. Bartlett went to live with her son, and Mrs. Hill went to live with her daughter, Mrs. George Welch. Mrs. Hill was ever very active in charitable and Church work. Wherever living she was interested in the Parish activities, and especially in Diocesan Auxiliary Work. She never failed to meet the responsibilities of any duty, nor neglect the call to do what she could.

37. GEORGE (FREDERIC) HUNTER BARTLETT.—Son of Adelia Hunter (8) and Dr. Frederic W. Bartlett. Born in Buffalo, N. Y., May 24th, 1856. Married April 18th, 1883, at St. Paul's Cathedral (Episcopal), Buffalo, Alice Mary Evans, daughter of Charles W. Evans and Mary (Peacock) Evans, of Buffalo, N. Y. Children:

109. i. Virginia Evans, born October 9th, 1885, at Buffalo. Married George Reynolds Stearns, Jr., of Buffalo, April 5th, 1917, at St. Paul's Cathedral.
110. ii. Evans Ellicott, born July 9th, 1890, at Buffalo. Married Mary Hempel MacArthur of Buffalo, April 5, 1917, at First Presbyterian Church.

G. Hunter Bartlett prepared for College at the Heathcote School, Buffalo, and was graduated at Yale with the degree of Ph.B. in 1879. He received the degree of M.D. at the University of Buffalo in 1883, but never entered upon the practice of his profession. He also took a business college course, and a course in practical architectural work, a study in which he had long been interested, and has devoted his time and services to large business interests that were entrusted to him. For forty years past he has had full charge, as agent and attorney, of several large and important estates, with clients living in many states of the union. He has, in connection with this business, designed and superintended the erection of a number of buildings in Buffalo. He has been interested, from early boyhood, in devising novel mechanical apparatus. These devices were made for his own use, as a relaxation from business duties, but some of his ideas have been widely adopted. While still in college, he patented the use of a link of fusible metal as a fire protection in a generator for producing ozone from the oxydation of phosphorus, devised and used by his father, in his medical practice, for disinfecting and deodorizing sickrooms. This idea of a young student, nearly half a century ago, was a successful one, and it was one of the first patents in which fusible metal, indispensable in the great sprinkler systems of to-day, was used for fire prevention. Certain camera improvements of his have been widely used, and a new cabinet of folding frames, glazed, for preserving portraits of members was invented in 1900 while he was chairman of the portrait committee of the Saturn Club, Buffalo. Several of these cabinets are now in use by that organization. A more recent patented improvement in wood working tools was immediately adopted by the Stanley Rule and Level Company, and forms a part of its standard output.

He was joint author with his wife and father-in-law of the "History of St. Paul's Church, Buffalo, N. Y., 1817 to 1903," published in 1903 with many plans and illustrations. This book has been called one of the most complete Parish histories ever published in the United States. His latest historical paper, "Andrew and Joseph Elicott; the Plans of Washington City, and the Village of Buffalo, and some of the persons concerned," was printed in 1922 in Volume 26 of the publications of the Buffalo Historical Society, and also published in book form.

39. FREDERIC MALCOLM BRATHWAITE BARTLETT.—Son of Maria Hunter (9) and Rev. J. C. Brathwaite. Born September 22d, 1865. He never married. His mother dying when he was but a year old, he was adopted by Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Bartlett of Buffalo, N. Y. Was educated in the Buffalo schools, and in the Western Theological Seminary, at Chicago, Ill., where he studied for the ministry of the Episcopal Church, graduating in the year 1896. Was ordained to the Diaconate by Bishop McClaren of the Diocese of Chicago. He was later ordained to the priesthood. He served in the ministry at Miami, Florida, in the Bermuda Islands, and at the time of his death, June 21st, 1900, was Rector of St. Mary the Virgin's Church, San Francisco, California. He was drowned in Auga Calienta Creek, near San Francisco, upon the occasion of a day's outing with members of his choir. He is reported to have been a member of the Oblates of Mount Calvary, an organization of Clergymen connected with the Order of the Holy Cross, living under a devotional rule. His burial was in Forest Lawn cemetery, Buffalo, in the family lot of Dr. F. W. Bartlett.

40. JAMES HUNTER CAMPBELL.—Son of Emma Hunter (10) and Rev. Alexander Campbell. Born August 17th, 1860. He never married. Died October 31st, 1882. He was always rather delicate, but studious, and ambitious to complete his studies for entrance into the ministry of the Methodist Church. During his College course he took a cold which developed into pneumonia, and finally into consumption. In the hope that a trip to the west, to a high and dry climate, would benefit him he undertook the journey; but growing weaker, he turned homeward, but was only able to reach the home of his cousin, Orby Hunter, at Kansas City, where he died in October, 1882, the very year in which he would have graduated if he had been able to complete the course.

James was a young man of intellectual ability far beyond the ordinary. He was clear in thought, studious in habit, and classical in expression. For a time he was editor of the College paper, and frequently wrote special articles for publication. It has been our privilege to read a number of articles from his pen, and to note the apparent natural flow of language, and their high literary character, for so young a writer. Had he lived, he would have made a good record in his ministerial life.

42. ELIZABETH ADELIA CAMPBELL.—Daughter of Emma Hunter (10) and Rev. Alexander Campbell. Born June 22d, 1865. Married Rev. John Gilmore Lewis, July 6th, 1893. Now (1923) living in British Columbia. Children:

- 114. iv. John Lloyd Campbell, born April 4th, 1908. Died January 3d, 1909.

Elizabeth Adelia was educated in Oakwood High School, Ontario, Canada, and Ontario Ladies College, Whitby, from which she graduated in art in 1887. She taught art and French in Greensboro Female College, Greensboro, Alabama, from 1887 to 1891. She was married at Atherly, Ontario, Canada. The Rev. John Gilmore Lewis is a minister of the Methodist Church. He is a graduate of Victoria University, and has a B.A. degree.

Later was a student at Lyons Preparatory School, New York City, receiving his diploma in 1888. In 1889 was engaged with the Globe-Wernicke Co. of Cincinnati, as salesman, with headquarters at Syracuse, N. Y. In July, 1909, accepted the position as sales manager for the Pluto Powder Co., with headquarters at Ishpeming, Michigan. In July, 1914, went with the Du Pont Chemical Co., and in 1918 became sales manager of that company, and head of the New York offices.
